Trudeau independent Tory

Rejects two nation theory

Pierre Elliott-Trudeau, portraying himself as a Liberal who would follow his "own ideas" in Parliament, last Friday rejected the "two-nation" and "associate-state" theories as harmful to Canada.

The Liberal candidate in Mount Royal told an open meeting of the Liberal Club that he would not take a cabinet post "so I'll be free to disagree without breaking solidarity".

Trudeau said he "rejected a cabinet post before it was offered" so he could differ on such things as "Mr. Pearson's stand on the nuclear issue with which I violently disagree".

"I'm not going into the Liberal Party to swallow all its ideas hook, line and sinker", he added.

The professor of constitutional law at l'Université de Montréal devoted most of his speech to outlining his conception of the Canadian nation.

He said the only basis for Canada is that "a group of people decided that it is good and convenient to live together as one group in one state."

This came about, he continued, a century ago when a consensus was reached which led to a federal compromise.

"But we must keep this consensus alive for it is the only reason for Canada", he added.

This, he said, must be done by constant debate at all levels of government.

He felt that the progress of the Quebec provincial government caused the consensus to be "eroded away by lack of interest" and led to the idea of two nations.

"If you have two nations you'll have two consensuses. Then you will no longer have a foundation for a nation," he argued.

When questioned about his support in the past for New Democrats, Trudeau replied that "the NDP had for a long time been the conscience of the Canadian people until it decided to try to win elections at all costs."

He added that "socialism is no longer the vehicle for social change. The problems we face go far beyond socialism".

Debating Union to present Free education discussion

The Debating Union will present a debate on free education today at 7:45 pm in Moyse Hall.

The formal resolution is "That this House is of the opinion that all higher education should be free". Jean-Pierre Goyer, Liberal candidate in Dollard-des-Ormeaux, Professor A. Fenichel of the Department of Economics and Political Science, and Patrick MacFadden, Editor-in-chief of the Daily, will support the resolution.

Dean D. L. Mordell of the Faculty of Engineering, Brian Robinson of the English Department and Lionel Chetwynd, a third year Law student, will speak for the negative.

National Student Day

McGill not to protest

by VIVIAN WISEMAN

McGill will not participate officially in Wednesday's National Student Day, the Canadian Union of Students' nation-wide programme of action to protest the cost of higher education.

The decision not to take part was reached after student governments at Laval and the University of Montreal declined to join the CUS-coordinated protest. External vice-president Ken Cabatoff said the council would not consider advisable any action for free education in Quebec without the support of at least one French-speaking university.

Participation by the Quebec universities is hampered by the pressures of limited time. L'Union Générale des Etudiants du Québec will be holding its own congress in Quebec City and therefore its member universities will be unable to join the demonstrations.

Since McGill is currently seeking membership in UGEQ, lack of time is one reason it will not take part, Cabatoff explained.

No official reaction has been given by either UGEQ or CUS, although unofficially, UGEQ and the member universities are reported to be pleased with McGill's action. No activities are planned by the Students' Union for National Students' Day, to be held this week by CUS. At the present time, the Students' Union is engaged in discussing the possibility of retaining CUS

Quebec universities form news association

by DOUG WILSON

QUEBEC — Presse Universitaire Québécoise, an agency for news exchange similar to the Canadian University Press, was formed here yesterday by four university papers, including the Daily.

Laval, Université de Montréal and Université de Sherbrooke are the other participants in PUQ.

"Marvellous", said Daily Editor Patrick MacFadden, "this is one of the most practical steps that can be taken to further an understanding of French-Canada in this country." Every Canadian university receives the Daily, and consequently, the PUQ stories.

Coinciding with the birth of PUQ, the French language university newspapers decided to withdraw from Presse Etudiante Nationale, which did not include any of this province's English journals.

A three day conference preceded the decision, attended by directors and senior staffers of Le Carabin, Le Quartier Latin, (Continued on page 2)

International students

All overseas students and members of ISA clubs are urged to attend the open Council Meeting of the International Students' Association. The foreign student's stake in current problems of student government will be discussed by Sola Ogunbanwo, Sharon Sholzberg, Ken Cabatoff and Patrick MacFadden.

The meeting will be held in the Union at 7 pm, Rooms 123 and 124.

Redmen downed 20-0

by LAWRENCE HAIMOVITCH

LONDON, Ont. — The University of Western Ontario Mustangs rolled to their fourth consecutive victory Saturday, blanking Redmen 20-0 before a delighted home-coming crowd of over 11,000.

The win solidified the 'Stangs grip on first place in the Senior Intercollegiate Football League and plunged the hapless Redshirts deeper into the cellar.

Halfbacks Rob Campbell and Art Froese led the Mustang effort. Campbell scored on the Mustangs' first play from scrimmage when he romped 50 yards to paydirt on a pitchout from quarterback Bob Israel.

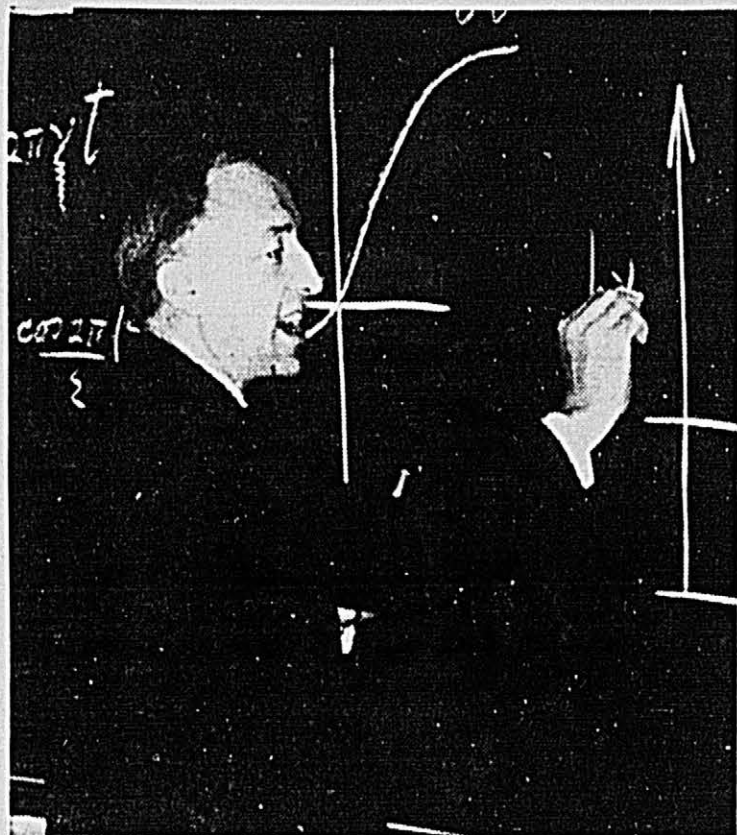

The touchdown was a direct result of a defensive error by the Redmen. In the defensive huddle before the play, Murray Orlando and Marty Wenger decided to switch assignments. However, at the line of scrimmage Orlando, seeing Western in a double wing formation, shouted to Wenger to call off the play because of the Western alignment.

With the crowd roaring, Wenger did not hear the end's instructions and red-dogged in. Fortunately for the Mustangs, Israel had called a power sweep to the side where confusion prevailed and the Western captain had little trouble in reaching paydirt.

Art Froese, the Mustangs' hard-running halfback, had a great game as he rushed for 94 yards in 13 attempts. In addition he kicked a 34-yard field goal and added two converts to stretch his scoring lead. He was especially adept in the open field where he demonstrated a knack for using his blockers to best advantage.

LASER BEAM: Dr. B. T. Stoicheff of the University of Toronto addressing the first Canadian undergraduate physics conference, held at McGill yesterday, on the subject of the laser beam.

German Department offers trip to Germany

The German Department is sponsoring a trip to Germany for the summer of 1966.

The Department, in co-operation with the Canadian-German Academic Exchange Association, holds this offer open to students in all German courses and any students who have had at least 100 hours of German.

In May, the students will fly to Frankfurt by jet. The return jet fare from Montreal is $134.03. After a free visit to Berlin, they will be given jobs for two months. They will then have a month to travel. Those who can afford three months' travel are not required to work.

The CGAEA is subject to the rule set by the airlines that only members of at least six months' standing can fly. Membership must be purchased immediately at a cost of one dollar. The Secretary of the German Department in Peterson Hall 238 will issue membership cards until November 15.

Campus Estrien, and the Daily. Agreement in principle was reached on the role of PUQ as an instrument for exchanging news, features and photographs. A pro tem arrangement for a telephoned news co-operative was made until a more formalised organisation is established.

The Daily, which is to continue a member of CUP will send news to other PUQ members in English and receive their releases in French.

MacFadden pointed out that joint membership in CUP and PUQ will make the Daily the only student newspaper in Canada with guaranteed coast to coast news coverage.

membership with UGEQ and the member universities.

Two other English-speaking Quebec schools will go ahead with their plans. Andre Morazain, external vice-president of the Loyola College council, said Loyola would participate in National Student Day because it was too late to change the plans that have been made.

Sir George Williams University, which is not a member of either CUS or UGEQ, will hold a strictly local study day with discussions on free education.

The CUS National Student Day will include marches, teach-ins, rallies and the presentation of briefs to governments by about 40 universities.

McGill holds physics conference

Ninety student from all over Canada attended the first Canadian Undergraduate Physics Conference here this weekend.

The delegates had the opportunity to meet well-known physicists and become acquainted with contemporary research in physics and the programmes of other universities.

Dr. B.T. Stoicheff of the University of Toronto delivered the opening lecture. Dr. Stoicheff, a noted Canadian physicist, discussed recent laser experiments. He demonstrated interesting laser techniques, including a visual demonstration of changing blue light to red.

Dr. R.E. Bell, President of the Canadian Association of Physicists, Director of McGill's Radiation Laboratory and Vice-Dean of the Physical Sciences Division, addressed the convention at a banquet in Prince Albert Hall on Saturday night.

Dr. Bell gave an optimistic view of the future of physics in Canada and favourably compared Canadian research with research done in the United States.

Other lectures were given by Dr. J. Van Kranendonk of Toronto who discussed spontaneous, stimulated, and super radiation, and by Dr. J.A. Cameron of McMaster, who delivered a lecture about perturbed angular correlation with regard to nuclear spectroscopy.

Twelve undergraduate students presented papers and delivered lectures. Bruce Pettitt of McGill discussed wind shear in architecture and Ernst Grundke and Adam Holbrooke of Dalhousie presented a lecture on oceanography based on work done off the coast of Nova Scotia.

Bill Sherwood of the University of Toronto spoke of his research at the Dunlop Observatory on "Quasars", or "Quasi stellar sources" of energy.

Executive duties in planning the Conference were shared by Bob Peterson of McGill and Tom Kuiper of Loyola.

The convention, financed by the registration fees of the twenty participating universities and grants from the Canadian Association of Physicists and McGill's Physics Department, will be held in Toronto next year.

Free tickets available for Career Conference

Free tickets are available for the Careers Conference sponsored by the Women's Union and the Marianopolis Students' Society in conjunction with their alumnae.

The Conference, which is being held in the PSCA and the Marianopolis Administration Building, is open to women students from McGill, Marianopolis, Sir George and Loyola. It claims to give women students an insight into careers open to them after graduation. Tickets are available today from 11 am to 2 pm in the Leacock Building and RVC, and from noon to 2 pm in the Union Ticket Office.

The events, beginning at 7:15 pm and lasting approximately two hours each, will include panel discussions and question periods on the following topics:

October 28, PSCA — Arts and Sciences, including natural sciences, biological sciences, fine arts, psychology, chemistry and languages.

October 28, Marianopolis — Business, including business information systems, personnel work, merchandising and retailing, finance and market research.

November 2, PSCA — Community Vocations, including social work, library work, teaching, law and health.

November 3, Marianopolis — Civil Service, including a Civil Service Commission panel discussing government service.

November 4, PSCA — Communications, including radio, television, the National Film Board of Canada, journalism, public relations and advertising.

Carnival appointments

Jim Harrington, executive Chairman of Winter Carnival for 1965-66, has announced the appointment of three persons to the Winter Carnival Committee.

Geoff Hyland, a fifth year chemical engineer and chairman of Friday Night last year, will serve as vice-chairman. Former assistant treasurer Sal Lovecchio, B.Com.3, will be treasurer. The position of co-ordinator of Carnival will be filled by Andy Jamieson, a third-year Science student.

Jim Harrington, BA4, was vice-chairman of last year's Carnival and chairman of Friday Night the previous year.

Quebec needs Bill of Rights claims Montreal lawyer

"Quebec needs a forceful Bill of Rights, a fair Accommodations Act, an ombudsman, and an enlargement of public opinion," Montreal lawyer Claude-Armand Sheppard said at a meeting of the Humanist Society last Thursday.

Speaking on "the Individual versus Collective Rights", he stressed the need for increased public awareness of the importance of civil liberties in Quebec. He warned that in the quest of a nation, group, or any collective for civil liberties, the individual is often forgotten.

He remarked that in their quest for Quebec independence, Quebec Separatists tend to go the absolute, believing that "if you're not with me you're against me." Anyone having independent views is considered a traitor. He emphasised that we must protect the individual point of view and allow it to be heard freely.

Sheppard encouraged student activism and non-violent protest, viewing the proliferation of active organisations and student associations as a sign of healthy concern. He said that energies expended by students in the cause of Viet Nam could be channeled into improving the domestic situation.

Existing civil laws would be more effective, he said, "if lawyers and judges took the trouble to use them." For example, judges often disallow use of the Bill of Rights during trial on the grounds that it does not apply clearly enough to the case. "Quebec needs a forceful Bill of Rights, a Fair Accommodations Act, an ombudsman, and an enlargement of public opinion," Sheppard said.

Ombudsman

VANCOUVER (CUP) —

Simon Fraser University students have elected an ombudsman to investigate student complaints.

At a council meeting October 13, John Mynott, a second year student, was chosen for the post. Students with grievances against faculty or administration will be able to take their problems to Mynott, who will advise the parties concerned.

Queen opens Blood Drive

The Blood Drive collected 651 pints on Friday after it was officially opened by Carnival Queen Chickie Fuhrer.

At the opening ceremony, John Turner, Liberal Candidate in St. Lawrence-St. George, Dr. Ronald Christie, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, Justice Miller Hyde, representing the Board of Governors and Gerald Bronfman, president of the Red Cross Association, all wished the Blood Drive success in its venture.

Following the ceremonies there was a parade led by the Majorettes, Droplettes and Redman Band. Three floats depicting "Progress in Bloodshed" toured the campus and a reception was held later for invited guests.

Big Bleeder, who has taken up residence in the lobby of the Union, reports that P&OT is leading the Inter-Faculty race, with 9.5% of the School having donated. Commerce is second with 7.5% and Arts and Science and Nursing are tied for third with 7.1%. The only faculty not yet represented on the charts is Divinity.

Molson Hall leads the race in the Residence Competition, with 29.0% having bled, and the RVC girls are next with 11.4%. Of the men's fraternities, Lambda Chi Alpha and Delta Sigma Phi are way ahead, while Alpha Gamma Delta, Delta Phi Epsilon, Gamma Phi Beta, Gamma Alpha Phi and Sigma Delta Tau are tied for highest mark among the women's fraternities.

The hour between 5 pm and 6 pm has been left free for people without appointments, and the clinic will be open until 9 pm on Tuesday and Thursday. There is no special clinic for medical students this year.

Lunch hour entertainment will be presented daily by popular campus personalities. The New Roddick Singers will perform today.

Friday's prize winners were: Andy Jamieson, a dinner for two at the Stagecoach Restaurant; Marion Mindel, a dress from Lawrence Dress Co.; Mike Chodos, dinner for two at Paesano's; Karen Austen, a beauty salon hairdo; Dave Gibson, a $10 gift certificate from Harry Gold's; Rosemarie Lach, a beauty salon hairdo; Elaine Schaffer, a gift certificate from Morgan's; Billy Mauer, a movie pass for two; and Bernie Sepinwall, a subscription to Playboy, courtesy of Playboy College Subscriptions.

Ann Longhurst, Lindsay Scott, Beatrice Briggs, Jill Johnson and Carolyn Springer won subscriptions to Time Magazine, courtesy of College Subscription Service.

In addition, minute prizes were distributed in the clinic, courtesy of Oslind's. Bonus prizes are offered each day to the first 150 donors.

Prize winners can pick up their gifts between 1 pm and 2 pm in Room 467 in the Union.

Quebec Student Liberals defeat unilingualism motion

A motion calling for unilingualism in Quebec was defeated at a special congress of the Quebec Students' Liberal Federation Saturday.

The motion, asking the Quebec government to make the French language "the only official language in the State of Quebec", was sponsored by the Université de Montréal delegation.

McGill Liberal Club President Murray Weiner led the opposition to the motion. He was supported by both English and French-speaking delegates.

The Federation finally accepted an amendment terming French the "language having priority" in the province.

It was sponsored by another Université de Montréal student who did not share the general view of his delegation.

Claude Blouin, President of the Université de Montréal Liberal club, declared that his organisation would study the possibility of quitting the student federation and aligning themselves directly with the Quebec Young Liberal Federation.

The Quebec Student Liberal Federation comprises 13 clubs, the majority of which are French-speaking.

The Congress was held all day Saturday at the Ramada Inn with Municipal Affairs Minister Pierre Laporte as guest speaker.

Police raid Café André

The Morality Squad made a surprise raid on the Café André (the Shrine) at about 11 Friday night.

Quebec Provincial Police arrested 41 underage patrons. A few of them scuffled with police as they tried to escape through back exits.

All the minors apprehended were taken to the nearby police precinct number 10. They were booked and finally released. Some of them had been arrested in previous nightclub raids. The operator of the nightclub was also held. A Café spokesman refused to comment on the incident.

Enrollment increases

An increased number of foreign students have registered at Macdonald College this year.

Total registration in Agriculture, Home Economics, and Education is about 1,720 compared to 1,656 last year, an increase of 4%. First year Agriculture has its greatest enrolment since after World War II.

The majority of non-Canadian students are from Commonwealth countries with many from the West Indies. More foreign students are attending Macdonald as interest abroad increases.

CUSO volunteers from Africa speak tomorrow

Two Canadian University Students Overseas volunteers, recently returned from Africa, will address students Tuesday night on their experiences with the Canadian "peace corps" group.

John Baigent, one of the pair, is a former volunteer and co-ordinator in Ghana, and is now a CUSO staff member, in charge of the West Africa programme. Normand Asselin, the other CUSO veteran, is a former volunteer in Gabon, and is now in charge of the French Overseas programme.

The pair will address students on the aims and programmes of CUSO, and the opportunities open to students interested in volunteer service, Tuesday at 1 pm in L-26. The same evening at 8 pm the Student Christian Movement will feature an informal discussion with the two volunteers at 3625 Aylmer Street.

ABOUT TO DROP ... here they are, this year's crop of Droplettes. You can see them in person tomorrow on lower campus at the second annual Droplette football game.

Canadian campuses to demonstrate in demand of universal accessibility

OTTAWA (CUP) — Mass demonstrations, panel discussions, and teach-ins are planned across Canada for National Student Day October 27 to dramatise the demand for universal accessibility to higher education.

Support for the Canadian Union of Students' action programme for that day is strong in some regions, but spotty in others.

In Ottawa the national CUS effort will be climaxed by a march on Parliament Hill from the city's four universities. CUS President Patrick Kenniff will address a meeting there along with representatives of the political parties. CUS is hoping for a spokesman from the Canadian Labour Congress and the parent-teacher associations.

Methods vary from Nova Scotia's plan to march on the provincial legislature as well as demonstrating on all seven of the province's campuses to Saskatchewan's wait and see attitude.

Newfoundland students at Memorial University, already assured of free education by Premier Smallwood, will demonstrate in solidarity with students in the rest of the country.

New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island students are planning publicity and education programmes.

Across the strait at Victoria University students plan to march to a theatre for a public forum, where political candidates, university administrators and government speakers will address them.

Edmonton and Calgary students are planning to create an Alberta Association of Students that will carry on the fight for student demands after National Student Day.

In Edmonton students will tape $1500 worth of dimes to a sidewalk to give a graphic picture of the cost of higher education for a student for one year.

In Manitoba students at Brandon College are planning a meeting with speeches from all political parties, a debate on free education and a jazz concert at night.

UBC Council decides against staging march

VANCOUVER (CUP) — The Students' Council of the University of British Columbia has turned down the proposal of its "Education Action Committee" for a mass march of UBC students on the meeting of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada to be held October 27 in Vancouver.

In its place, Students' Council President Byron Hender said a rally will be held on the campus on that date. Also, a token procession will be held by representatives from all faculties and universities in British Columbia plus high school presidents, the Students' Council decided October 12.

Bob Cruise, co-Chairman of the Education Action Committee, predicted that the Council's move would result in action from other sources. "Students' Council will soon be by-passed by other organisations on campus, and this does not just mean the wierdie-beardies," he said. He predicted students would march anyway because of disillusionment with "the bureaucratic student government" that "cannot act in a positive direction."

Council members appeared to be against the march because they felt there was too great an opportunity for adverse press coverage.

But an editorial in the campus newspaper, the Ubysses, called the Committee's original proposal "just a simple, namby-pamby, restrained, orderly demonstration," and accused the Council of "trying to get as far away as they could from being forced to take some stand."

A full page hole at 4 pm — perhaps I should have left it blank to let them know what it would be like without a daily, or maybe they didn't think of that when they signed, open meetings everywhere but nothing open, close books, close minds, be sure to come to the revival meeting tomorrow at 1 and don't forget the tar, maybe if Vivian, Danny, Don, Susan, Anita, Ally, Bob, Lawrence, Bernice, Kasbar, and Jack close their eyes it will all go away, but Joanna and Judy know this is a living nightmare.

How should we presume

The McGill fee dispute, like last year's student revolt at Berkeley, suddenly illuminated the dark, unhealthy twilight zone of student-administration relationships. It is clear that at McGill the administration has traditionally adopted a paternalistic attitude towards the student body. Like Papal bulls, fees are assessed and policies pronounced on a like-it-or-lump-it basis. For their part, McGill students have been perfectly acquiescent. They seem to regard their presence at the university not as their legitimate educational right in a modern society but as a sort of favour proffered by the admissions office; holding membership in the elite club which the university seems to be, how could they presume to meddle in its operations?

As students we must remember that we are the subjects of the educational process. We should be at the university not by divine grace but because everyone has the right to an education who is capable of benefiting from it. Where, who, and what is taught is, in a most essential sense, our affair. When American students hold "bitch-ins" to protest against being "spindled, folded, or mutilated", it is symptomatic of a dire alienation between the teachers and the taught, which will dissolve only with closer contact between student, professor, and administrator. This will not be created by ad hoc arrangements, a tutorial here and a faculty course there, but by solid institutionalised channels of student-faculty-administration contact.

A step towards this is the scheme whereby graduating students submit critiques of the courses and professors, already in effect in some Ivy League schools. Institutionalised consultation of the student body should go far beyond this, of course, to broach every issue relevant to education, its accessibility and its environment. But if Harvard is limping in this direction, can McGill be far behind?

Fable for the folks

Parables have been hauled into use over the past few days on the McGill campus. We think it an excellent thing that this particular literary form has once more made a long overdue appearance. Late-comers to métier, nevertheless we would like to add our ten cents worth to the dialogue.

Our story concerns the late and lamented Sarto Fournier, Mayor of Montreal before the city was given a new image by the Drapeau-Saulnier new broom. Sarto was a man for all seasons, who believed in the dollar to buy votes and rarely found any reason to become an honest doubter. The rumour is that in his fight against the fiery Drapeau, the kitty available amounted to a whopping two million dollars.

A young reporter from one of our daily papers was given as his first major assignment the task of covering a campaign speech of the redoubtable Sarto. Keen man that he was, our young reporter struggled manfully with his inadequate shorthand to record Sarto's declamations for posterity. Thousands of words passed through the ether and got scribbled on to the wilting pad of the sweating cub. At the end of the meeting, as our man was leaving, he found his way barred by an enormous, hairy hatchet man of Sarto's who inquired which paper the young man worked for. Our reporter, scared out of his mind by the bearing and physical ability of this monster, blurted out the name. Whereupon the great monolith smiled, scratched his chest and began to fumble through the substantial pile of envelopes that he was clutching to his bosom. Selecting the relevant one, he stuck it into the terrified pocket of our young reporter and clunked off to the other newsmen, dispensing one envelope each.

Arriving in the newsroom to prepare his story, the reporter tore open the envelope, hoping in his naive way to find inside a list of Sarto's future engagements. To his horror, he found instead a crisply-folded fifty dollars.

Aghast, he promptly returned the money to the appropriate quarter, on the grounds that he, cub reporter, idealist and believer in the freedom of the press, could not be bought.

Our age would perhaps smile at such purity. In our wisdom, we know that everyone has a price, and that he who pays the piper, whether as an individual or a collectivity, by definition calls the tune.

Don't we?

Misunderstood Petition

Dear Sir:

I would like to clarify a misunderstanding expressed in letters appearing in the Daily of October 22, with respect to the petition aimed at the resignation of the Editor-in-Chief of the Daily. Mr. Blauer's comments, although somewhat tempestuous, possessed on the one hand the asset of content, and on the other the liability of misinformation.

A controversial American political philosopher encourages thinkers to "check your premises". A "premise" is "a basis stated or assumed, from which reasoning proceeds". Mr. Blauer would do well to heed this admonition.

He states: — "The principal charge [of the petition]... is that Mr. MacFadden is or was a Communist and that his editorials have too often been of a radical and/or left-wing variety." Because Mr. Blauer has not read the petition, this premise, from which his comments originated and on which they rest, is incorrect.

Freedom of speech is not the issue. Nor yet is it "Red-baiting". The issue is that Mr. MacFadden has acted irresponsibly in the consummation of his duties as Editor-in-Chief.

A privately-owned newspaper may, within the law, print what it wishes. Its financial supporters have the responsibility to criticize the management of their enterprise and to act on these criticisms. Further, the public has the option of buying either it or another publication.

The McGill Daily is not in the same circumstances. It has recently received a grant of approximately $27,000. This money is collected from all McGill students. The issue is not whether Mr. MacFadden should be free to express his opinions, but whether he is acting responsibly or exceeding proper limits of self expression in a student-supported publication. The editorials are the proper domain of the Editor (in this case, Mr. MacFadden) guided by the Editorial Board. The news content is also under the jurisdiction of the management, and ultimately of the Editor-in-Chief.

This year the pages of the Daily have been filled with social activism, political and parapolitical content consistently supporting, for lack of a better adjective, one and only one politico-philosophical viewpoint.

This is the pertinent point on which the petition currently circulating the campus turns. The Daily should not be used as a podium on which efforts are made to preach one political and social viewpoint. To do so outside the editorial columns with such consistency in my view constitutes flagrant mismanagement.

Again I repeat that it is Mr. MacFadden's right to express his opinions as Editor-in-Chief, but in the editorial columns, and they alone. He has failed to do this, and has displayed no intention of so doing.

In conclusion, may I remind Mr. Blauer that in signing the petition, we students are not speaking against freedom of speech, but are upholding the principle of objectivity and responsibility in our newspaper.

Daily Fights Apathy

Dear Sir:

Last Saturday, I noticed a petition being circulated in Redpath Library. When I discovered the content of this petition I was appalled. The document, whose size allegedly has reached the monstrous proportion of 1,500 names, demands the removal of Mr. MacFadden from his post as editor-in-chief of the Daily. This petition, when presented to the President of the Students' Society will force an Open Meeting the result of which, if even half those who signed attend, will be Mr. MacFadden's dismissal.

The reasons for this petition I can only guess from the several frightening speeches delivered in Hyde Park last week. Mr. Shapray, who apparently was not courageous enough to express his opinions straightforwardly, resorted to a cloak of grotesque humour. Obviously Mr. Shapray couldn't prove from anything written in the Daily that Mr. MacFadden was a Communist so he decided to fabricate a newspaper that could prove it. The subsequent speakers criticized Mr. MacFadden for presenting radical left-wing opinions on the newspapers as well as in the editorials. Not one article or editorial was cited as an example of this alleged leftist slant.

"We paid for the Daily", they cried, "We have the right to the kind of paper we want." Not one speaker described just what kind of paper that would be. Yet the mob cheered them on, just as the mob sitting in the Library calmly signed the petition one by one, table by table, never bothering to ask WHY.

One speaker admitted that before this year he had never been interested in campus affairs or politics but now he cried out that even apathetic students like himself must arise and wipe out Mr. MacFadden. This very argument supposedly against the Daily is the best argument in its favour. This year, for the first time in my memory the McGill campus is intellectually alive. Even politically apathetic students are discussing subjects like American intervention in Viet Nam. Why? Because they disagree with a Daily editorial. Students are discussing free education, McGill's participation in UGEQ, the Canadian election, the Kashmir question because the issues were presented in an interesting manner in a news story or feature or in a thought-provoking editorial.

The purpose of a college newspaper is not to present the consensus of opinion of the campus, or to be a publicity sheet or a forum for so-called collegiate humour. Its purpose is to keep ideas alive on campus. For the first time in its history the Daily is accomplishing this purpose.

It is disheartening that the same student body that demonstrated 2,000-strong in favour of free education can just 6 months later be stirred up by a few name-calling rabble rousers to sign a petition that in one thoughtless blow could destroy freedom of speech and freedom of the press on campus.

FREE EDUCATION POLL

compiled by
JAMES MALLORY, JUDY REBICK
AND SUE SWAN

Is the Student Council stand against the fee increase too strong?

This question and others relating to the free education issue were answered in a cross-campus poll conducted recently by the Daily.

Despite the fact that the majority of the student body claimed to support the Council's stand, less than one third were willing to withhold $100 from the second fee instalment.

In answer to the question, "Do you support Students' Council's stand against the fee increase?" 60% said yes. Even though 63.5% indicated that they have decided to pay their fees in two instalments, only 29.7% said that, if requested by the SC, they would be willing to withhold $100. The reason for this discrepancy lay in students' reluctance to jeopardize their standing with the University.

The purpose of the poll was to determine the consensus of opinion of the student body on this vital issue. To ensure an accurate representation of student attitude, the campus was broken down proportionately to include all undergraduate faculties and years.

The poll showed that the debate on free education is far from decided — 59.4% said they were in favour of free education; 39.4% against.

Reactions to the issue were diverse and definite. Generally those in favour of free education felt that it was every qualified student's right to attend university, regardless of financial status. Those against feared that free education would result in lower standards and state control. They thought as well that the value of a university education would be depreciated if students didn't have to pay for it.

One student questioned expressed unconcern with the issue. He said the question of free education was unimportant to him. At the end of the interview it was discovered that this student was a member of the Students' Council.

Many of the comments showed a high degree of comprehension of the issues. One economically oriented student explaining his support of free education said "It's good for the country." Another student was concerned with the social problems involved: "We have enough rubbishes already. If everyone were granted the privilege of a free education there would be a miserable hoard of misfits sulking surreptitiously through our corridors".

More comments: "My education is worth $100 more to me." "It's cheaper."

"Expansion needs money."

"Fees aren't as high as in the U.S., we should be grateful."

Differences were also recorded in faculty attitudes to the Students' Council's stand. Almost 100% of the Faculties of Medicine

Breakdown by faculty	Arts	Science	Eng.	Comm.	Law	Med.	Totals
1) In favour of free education	60	69	63	33	40	17	59.4%
Against free education	35	31	37	67	60	83	39.4%
2) Support SC stand on fees	44	80	73	56	0	0	60.0%
Against SC stand on fees	52	20	23	44	100	100	38.2%
3) Willing to withhold $100	25	43	37	11	0	0	29.7%
Unwilling to withhold $100	50	39	50	78	100	100	49.1%
Uncertain	10	14	13	11	0	0	10.3%

and Law expressed complete disapproval of the measure proposed by Council. On the other hand Science gave 80% approval.

There were marked differences in faculty attitudes toward free education. Medicine was 83% opposed to free education, whereas Science was 69% in favour.

Several students admitted that they were uncertain as to what the exact stand of the SC was. However those opposed to the stand offered some cryptic comments.

The policy against the fee increase was described as "immature", "stupid", "ill-timed", "presumptuous" and "illegal".

The majority of students felt that the attack should be directed against the government rather than the university.

Some had stronger comments to make: "It's a polite form of blackmail."

"Compromise is possible between educated people."

"I consider it presumptuous for a student organization to register such a stubborn and thoughtless protest with university authorities who have abundantly shown their good faith in that they are short of funds."

"Stand is beneath the supposed dignity of the Students' Society."

"The stand is ineffective because McGill students are so apathetic, they lack the guts to stick behind it."

In general, it was found that students were well aware of and concerned with the situation.

Mental Health Service

Maturity, study problems cause student breakdown

by ROBERT TAYLOR

The university student, although a comparatively healthy individual, must endure the combined stresses brought on by growing up and the pressures of studies. These two factors, said Dr. John G. Lohrenz, Clinical Director of the McGill University Mental Health Service, are what prompted about 500 students to seek aid of the Service last year.

The service was inaugurated in 1960 on an experimental basis and was open to all full registered students in July, 1962. The first student mental health service came into existence 42 years ago at Westpoint Military Academy. At the present time, the McGill Service is staffed by four psychiatrists and two psychologists. The Service is not affiliated with any hospital or any of the University departments.

Dr. Lohrenz said that the majority of problems among students fall into four categories: study problems, problems brought on by sexual development, problems due to the transition from childhood to adulthood, and home sickness.

Pressures

Students are subjected to a great deal of pressure both in the home and at school to study harder in the frantic drive to get a degree. Often, said Dr. Lohrenz, a student who is not doing as well as he feels he should, seeks the assistance of the Mental Health Service in examining his present study habits and in establishing new ones.

Jack Kapica

Psychiatric aid: Dr. John Lohrenz, Clinical Director of the McGill Health Service, says most emotional problems treated by his department are not of a serious nature.

Sexual problems stem from an awakening within the adolescent of knowledge concerning his bodily functions and the natural desires created by such a discovery.

The third type of problems are the ones resulting from a desire for increased independence and freedom of action as one grows older. Many young people who are capable of successfully assuming the responsibilities of adulthood are prevented from doing so and many who are incapable are forced to mature at an abnormally rapid pace; both of these situations are potentially dangerous.

Dr. Lohrenz also reported that some foreign students seek clinical aid for homesickness.

The average number of visits per student who made use of the Mental Health Service last year was six. Only a very small percentage of these students proved to have a serious mental problem. Half of them came of their own volition while others came on the recommendation of one of their instructors.

Prevention aim

Dr. Lohrenz stressed that the Mental Health Service is completely confidential; no information is ever passed on without the knowledge and consent of the student in question. The main function of the Service is the prevention of serious emotional difficulties through short range treatment.

Lack of familiarity with the operations of the Service seems to be the major reason for the apparent reluctance of freshmen to make use of its facilities.

When asked if he felt that more students could benefit from the Service than do at the present time, Dr. Lohrenz said that approximately 8-10% of all university students see a psychiatrist at least once during the time they are in school. He stressed however that this should not be interpreted to mean that 8-10% of McGill students are in need of psychiatric help.

Any student who feels that he would benefit from a consultation with one of the doctors at the Mental Health Service, can make an appointment by phoning 844-6311, Local 525. The Service is located at the Student Health quarters at 517 Pine Ave. West.

Survey feature

This is the first of a series of polls to be conducted by the Daily this year. Opinion on important issues concerning the campus and student government will be sampled and appear periodically.

Student President Sholberg commented on the Daily survey. "The results of the poll do not indicate student apathy. Students realize they might be jeopardizing their academic careers unless there is one hundred percent compliance in paying their fees. The fact that a large percentage of campus agrees in theory with the SC stand is an indication that students take questions on the cost of their own education very seriously."

If all this issue did is to increase student awareness and illustrate that students have the right to express concern or disapproval over issues that affect them, then this issue served its purpose."

Tie for league lead

Tribe nips U of M 20-19

by MIKE BOONE

The Junior Varsity Indians faced the numerically and physically superior University of Montreal Carabins Saturday in the key game of the season, and won 20-19 in a thrilling finish to tie for the League lead.

The Indians had a 71-7 monkey on their backs from their last encounter with the Carabins and were determined to get rid of it. Despite bad weather and a muddy field, they did.

On the opening sequence of plays, Robin McNeil, mixing his plays brilliantly, moved the Tribe 85 yards for a TD. He capped the march with a 31-yard pass to Bobby Cooper. The extra point made the score 7-0.

Five minutes later, Mike Roberts grabbed a U of M fumble and raced 50 yds. for the Tribe's second major. In the second quarter, it was McNeil again. He moved the club 40 yds and dived over from the one to make it 19-0 for the Tribe.

The Carabin attack never got rolling. Quarterback Gerard Ducharme spent most of the half wallowing in the mud under the hard-charging Tribe defence.

The comeback

The Tribe took their 19-point lead into the second half but the Carabins refused to roll over and die. They scored the first time they got their hands on the ball.

Ralph Loader quick-kicked for a Tribe single and the 3rd quarter ended Tribe 20, Carabins 7.

Nine minutes into the 4th quarter, Ducharme hit Bernard Côté for a 50-yard touchdown play. Mike Butler, a defensive terror all day, blocked the convert: Tribe 20-Carabins 13.

The Carabins scored on their next set of downs. They tried to pass for the convert and Larry Fenske came out of nowhere to bat the ball away.

With two and a half minutes to go, it was 20-19 and the Indian offence went in to protect the lead. Robin McNeil rose to the occasion. Gambling, he threw first-down passes and the game ended with the Tribe on the Carabin four-yard line.

Team effort

Coach Ken Bellemare summed it up when he said "This was a great team effort. We have only 23 players but they fought all the way." It was hard to pick standouts.

Volleyball clinic in Currie gym features Olympic champions

A volleyball clinic featuring the men's and women's Olympic Volleyball Teams from both the Soviet Union and the United States will be held in the Sir Arthur Currie Gymnasium tomorrow at 3 pm.

This clinic is being sponsored by the Department of Physical Education of the Faculty of Education and will feature demonstrations of the fundamental skills of the game as well as team strategy.

It is part of a coast-to-coast tour by the Russian and American teams being sponsored by the federal government through the Directorate of Fitness and Amateur Sport.

The afternoon clinic will be open to a limited number of students upon presentation of identification cards. Admission will be on a first come first served basis.

The tour began in Vancouver and the teams have been working their way east. As of this weekend, the Russian men's and women's squads have both completely dominated the play. The U.S. representatives have not been able to win a single match.

The Russian men were the gold medalists at the Tokyo Olympics, while the Russian women captured the silver medal, placing second to Japan. The men are the present world champions, having won the world tournament in Warsaw about a month ago.

Soccer...

The soccer Redmen, paced by Don Macfarlane, played their best game of the season on Saturday as they shut out Bishop's 2-0.

Redmen...

Although they fell behind early, the Redmen didn't quit, and the defence tightened up at the game progressed. However, it was a shoddy offensive effort that wrecked the Redmen. They moved the ball well at times, especially in the second quarter when they racked up seven of their 15 first downs, but couldn't find the scoring range.

RAY LAWSON
Strong defensive game

"We lack consistency", muttered a disappointed Tom Mooney. The Redmen mentor praised the undefeated 'Stangs and said "they have a solid ball club and beat us with good hardnosed football".

Fumbles costly

Once again fumbles proved costly for the Redmen. They bobbled the ball three times in the second half and lost possession twice. The second miscue set up the Mustangs second major. Rich Ripstein was trying to pass when he was hit from behind and dropped the ball. Mike Armstrong, who seemed to be all over the field recovered at the Redmen 38 and seven plays later fullback Larry Burridge plunged over.

The big play in the drive was a 16 yard screen pass to Burridge who carried to the four. This touchdown made the score 17-0 and iced the verdict. Late Hockey...

The hockey Redmen take to the ice for the first time this season tonight. Practices are slated for 5:30 pm every night this week as the squad prepares for the OQAA campaign beginning on November 19.

in the final period Froese added his 34-yard field goal. The other three 'Stang points were scored by punter Robin Wearing, who kicked three singles in the first half.

Injuries

The rash of Redmen injuries continued as Glen St. John, Isaac Lerner and Brian Pilgrim suffered knee jolts. The injury to St. John appears to be a torn cartilage, and if it is, he will be lost for the rest of the season. His injury occurred early in the contest and disrupted the Redmen defensive backfield. Lerner and Pilgrim may have only incurred bruises and could dress for next week's start against Queen's.

For the Redmen there were few standouts although Mooney praised Ray Lawson for a top defensive performance. He also singled out linebacker Bob Berke and steady Wade Kenny for solid play.

Queen's crushes Varsity

The Queen's Golden Gaels moved into contention with a 31-0 victory over the slumping Toronto Varsity Blues. League standings show Western on top with a 4-0 mark, Toronto and Queen's at 2-2 and the Redmen winless in four starts. Western must defeat the second place finisher to avoid a post season playoff. It is possible for all of the three top squads to end the year at 4-2.
